Breast cancer-treatment for the future based on lessons from the past

Presented at the 54th Annual Meeting of the Southwestern Surgical Congress, Coronado, California, April 7-10, 2002.

James A. Edney, M.D.*

Department of Surgery, University of Nebraska Medical Center, 983280 Nebraska Medical Center, Omaha, NE 68198-3280, USA

Manuscript received September 19, 2002

Fellow Members of the Congress, family, and friends. I begin by offering my thanks to you for the honor of serving as the 54th President of this society. I am honored to follow in the footsteps of so many of the past presidents for whom I have great respect.

My greatest thanks go to my family. I want to acknowledge my mother Mary Jane Edney and thank her for her encouragement and wisdom over these many years. It goes without saying that were it not for her, I would not be standing before you today. As we all know a busy surgical career takes precious time away from our families. I thank my children for their understanding, unselfish and unquestioning support of my career over the past 25 years. Most importantly, I want to thank my best friend and wife, Debbie, for her encouragement, support, and infectious enthusiasm.

All of us are able to identify key individuals who have had a particularly profound impact on our careers. Although there are many, I would like to take a few moments to recognize three of those individuals who have played a particularly significant role on my career for which I am forever grateful.

One of these was the 51st president of this society who just stepped down from the podium. I first met Gene Moore in July of 1980 at the Denver General Hospital where he was an attending surgeon while I was doing my fellowship. I was immediately impressed with the determination, tenacity, and sense of focus that he brought to all aspects of his life whether it be work, play, or his family. Gene has been a source of inspiration for myself and a generation of surgeons.

and vision for the future of the department that inspired and reinvigorated the entire faculty. This is not meant to be construed in the pejorative sense but Bing is the consummate politician who led by building consensus and who had an almost instinctual ability to pick his way through the political mine field of academic medicine. While I learned many things about surgery from Bing, his most valuable lesson was how to lead by example. Bing has become one of the great leaders in American surgery today and a model for the ideal department chairman.

Finally, I want to recognize our 44th President and my good friend David Feliciano. My first memory of Dr. Feliciano was one of foreboding when at this meeting many
